General Information

1. What action are you requesting from the Board?

Amendment of Lease R-04B between Multnomah County, as Lessor, and State of Oregon, acting through the Department of Human Services, as Lessee for space at the Gateway Children's Center.

2. Please provide sufficient background information for the Board and the public to understand this issue. Please note which Program Offer this action affects and how it impacts the results.

The County purchased the Gateway Children's Center property and renovated the building now known as the Services Building, primarily for child assessment and related services integrated with the receiving center program. A lease was negotiated with the State of Oregon in November 2002 and has been amended to expire June 30, 2009. The State of Oregon wishes to extend this lease and Multnomah County has offered an amendment that would extend the lease term through June 30, 2014. This date will align with the expiration date with another lease held by the State of Oregon in the MDT Building at the same location which has been extended.

3. Explain the fiscal impact (current year and ongoing).

During the extension period the rent will be held at the current $4,056.65 per month for FY10 and will adjust by CPI each July 1st of the extension period effective July 1, 2010.

Carla,

I did a little tweaking, the changes aren't highlighted though, I bolded the agreement statement and in R-04B added a "Second"; and the language we insert in all later amendments about the agreement as "amended to date". The attached have been reviewed and are approved for submission to the BCC or routing for signatures as the case may be. Thanks.

Matt - Amendments were forwarded to State of OR for the above referenced leases at GCC. They have requested a few changes; one being a recital inserted into each document. The changes are in red in the attached documents. I really don't have any issues with their requests. Would you please review for content and advise and I'll move forward accordingly.

General Information

1. What action are you requesting from the Board?

Passage of a resolution certifying that $100,000 is an acceptable risk for loss during an undercover investigation.

2. Please provide sufficient background information for the Board and the public to understand this issue. Please note which Program Offer this action affects and how it impacts the results.

When conducting an undercover investigation through our Enforcement Division Special Investigations Unit it is sometimes necessary to display large sums of cash known as "flash money". The purpose of flash money is to provide convincing evidence during contact with a perpetrator of the undercover officer's ability to complete a purchase of illegal narcotics, dangerous drugs, stolen property, etc. The visual display of large sums of money is a necessary and common practice when establishing covert connections.

The use of flash money does not come without some of risk for loss. On occasion, although infrequently, a perpetrator will attempt to take the flash money by force in a robbery attempt. If successful, the lost flash money becomes lost revenue to the County. In the early 1990's the County's external auditors issued a finding that flash money must be acknowledged by the Board of County Commissioners as an acceptable loss risk in the event a robbery attempt is made. In prior years this acknowledgement was made through a budget note. However the late addition of the Special Investigations Unit into the FY 2010 budget precluded the budget note from being included in the adopted budget. This resolution, if adopted by the Board will serves as the acknowledgement of the potential risk.

3. Explain the fiscal impact (current year and ongoing).

The Board has historically acknowledged the loss of $100,000 as an acceptable risk.

4. Explain any legal and/or policy issues involved.

Good accounting procedures acknowledge potential risks or liabilities as a part of financial planning. Passage of this resolution will fulfill the audit requirement relating to a potential loss.

5. Explain any citizen and/or other government participation that has or will take place.

General Information

1. What action are you requesting from the Board?

Agreeing to support the development of and funding for a 16 bed crisis assessment and treatment center for mentally ill individuals in Multnomah County who are in need of crisis treatment and who do not need hospitalization for their serious mental health issue.

2. Please provide sufficient background information for the Board and the public to understand this issue. Please note which Program Offer this action affects and how it impacts the results.

Over two years ago Mayor Tom Potter and Chair Wheeler launched a task force to examine public safety and mental health services in the wake of the tragic death of Jim Chasse, a person who was experiencing severe mental illness. One of the most important recommendations was for the creation of a facility that would provide brief residential treatment and substantive psychiatric and medical services.

Currently the only option for people who are experiencing bouts of severe mental illness is a hospital bed. There are not enough psychiatric beds in our region or in our state and they are very expensive. While hospitalization is an important resource for people with mental illness, adding a "sub-acute" (less than hospitalization) option would better meet the needs of many people and would increase the availability of hospital beds for those with higher levels of need.

Tragically, hundreds of people with mental illness are housed in our jails. In some cases, there has been serious criminal behavior and the individual must be jailed to protect public safety. In other cases, people are in jail because there is inadequate mental health treatment in the community. Jail is very expensive and it is not a good treatment option.

The real answer for many people experiencing mental illness is a continuum of supports that bolster recovery and help maintain housing, social networks and employment. Hospitalization interrupts recovery. Untreated episodes of severe mental illness disrupt housing, employment and social supports.

Multiple partners and funding streams have been identified in order to build and maintain the Mental Health Assessment and Treatment Center. This resolution outlines the roles of the working partners and lays out a timeline for implementation.

3. Explain the fiscal impact (current year and ongoing).

No fiscal impact to FY2010 Budget. It is likely that a program offer will be submitted for the FY2011 budget to pay for some of the operating costs of the facility.

4. Explain any legal and/or policy issues involved.

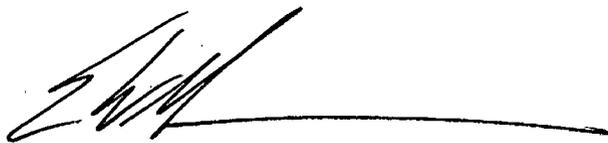

See number 2.

5. Explain any citizen and/or other government participation that has or will take place.

The Department of County Human Services and the Chair's office have been working with the City of Portland, the Portland Development Commission, Central City Concern and Mental Health Advocates around the community and the state to create this plan to build and sustain a Mental Health Assessment and Treatment Center.

RESOLUTION NO. _____

Supporting the Development of and Funding for a 16 Bed Crisis Assessment and Treatment Center for Mentally Ill Individuals in Multnomah County who are in Need of Crisis Treatment and who do Not Need Hospitalization for their Serious Mental Health Issues

The Multnomah County Board of Commissioner Finds:

- a. The Multnomah County Board of Commissioners in its role as the Local Mental Health Authority seeks to respond to the needs of individuals with mental illness in our community including our crisis call center, mobile crisis response and walk-in services. A critical part of an ideal crisis safety net is a crisis assessment and treatment center where individuals can get crisis treatment in a homelike, non-hospital setting.
- b. Multnomah County is the payer of last resort for involuntary mental health hospitalization for indigent Multnomah County residents. Without the complete range of services within our community, individuals with serious mental illness often turn to hospitals when they could be served in a less intensive, less expensive environment.
- c. Without the full range of options to respond to a mental health crisis, police officers are forced to take many individuals to our jails where it is difficult to treat their illness and they are inappropriately confined at great cost to the County.
- d. Working with the City of Portland, the Portland Development Commission and Central City Concern, the County has developed a plan to address this need through the redevelopment of the David P. Hooper Center. Detoxification currently provided at the Hooper Center will be relocated to a redeveloped hotel site in the Rose Quarter. Once these services are relocated, the Hooper Center will be remodeled to provide a location for Crisis Assessment and Treatment Services. The County has contributed $1 million towards the remodel of the hotel site. The Portland Development Commission has set aside $2 million for the redevelopment of the Hooper site. The partners will work with each other and the State of Oregon to ensure that redevelopment funds are sufficient for the remodel of the Hooper site. Crisis Assessment and treatment services would open in the Hooper Center in 2011.

The Multnomah County Board of Commissioner Resolves:

1. The Multnomah County Board of Commissioners and the Department of County Human Services will work with the State of Oregon, the City of Portland and other partners to secure the funding for the operations of a 16 bed Crisis Assessment and Treatment Center to be located at the David P. Hooper Center at 20 NE Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., Portland, OR. This Center will serve as an alternative to hospitalization for individuals experiencing a mental health crisis who can be best served in a less medical, more recovery oriented environment.

For Ted Wheeler and all Multnomah County Commissioners,

In 2001, during a generational redesign of Multnomah County's mental health system, a variety of providers, former patients, referring agencies, community members, and independent clinicians found the services at Providence Crisis Triage Center (CTC) to be in need of replacement.

The CTC opened in 1996, replacing the Metro Crisis Service, a well-managed telephone hotline. It was a 24 hour psychiatric clinic attached to Providence Hospital which would provide immediate treatment for anyone, and specialized in being a third choice for police, the first two being doing nothing and making an arrest. The CTC started unpredictably and badly, with the tragic death of Emily Comeaux, a person with needs beyond the comprehension of the CTC staff.

Prospective patients, sick and in crisis, who were coached to seek services at the CTC, regularly waited hours before seeing a clinician. Sick children were kept in the same waiting room as adult patients.

Cost of care was high and rising. Some patients and some clinicians chronically overused the CTC, clogging the service for others. Patients reported being misunderstood, were put on psychiatric holds unnecessarily, given the wrong medicine, or complained their concerns were dismissed.

After some public debate, and critical events such as the death of Jose Meija Poot, Providence Hospital and Multnomah County, both pointing fingers at each other, quit the contract and closed the CTC.

The re-designers proposed and announced an alternative. The newly formed Cascadia would open five walk in clinics which would be open 24 hours, staffed with able bodied clinicians, and located in all five quadrants of the city. Anyone could walk in and see someone in a few minutes. The costs would be lower because the clinics were uncoupled from a hospital.

The clinics opened with media fanfare. Within a few weeks, County administrators began saying too few people were using the clinics. If hours could be shortened, costs could be shaved and no one was coming at midnight anyhow. Within a year Cascadia, with it's first round of financial contractions closed one after another, leaving eventually just one, and not open twenty-four hours, and only available to people with certain sorts of insurance.

The closure of the CTC added a hard-to-measure burden on a variety of services and individuals which had no coordinated way of comparing experience and recognizing an additional set of responsibilities. These included alcohol and drug treatment centers, respite houses, the jail and their public health staff, police officers, tenant / landlord court, secure residential facilities, the psychiatric security review board, civil commitment court, both outpatient and inpatient mental health service providers, public housing agencies, hospital emergency rooms, psychiatric day treatment or socializing programs, inner city businesses, the circuit courts, hospital psychiatric wards, homeless shelters, private security patrols, public health clinics, Project Respond, parole and probation officers, family members, landlords, local churches and various do-gooder operations.

We'd estimate the cost of not having this service is in the tens of millions of dollars per year. The demoralization is immeasurable.

So we applaud that the county leadership recognizes this facility is an important component of the continuum of services.

NAMING THE FACILITY

The name and how this facility is referred to is extremely important. As we begin to recognize what we've called mental illness is mental diversity, we want to be welcoming to those members of our community who are having strong moods and feelings they're worried about, be welcoming to people who are strange, who hear voices, who are fearful of hospitals and forms of authority, who are angry and potentially violent, who are unhappy with their life and want it to be over, who have been injured by too much medication and now behave or move oddly, who have a head injury, or are alcoholic, or are using drugs and are talking gibberish.

We want to welcome them. We want them to feel welcome. We want these people to put down their issues for a moment, come in the door, sit down, have a cup of tea, listen to some music, and get some acupuncture.

The facility should not be called or generally referred to as the "mental health crisis center" or any parallel term focusing attention on "illness" or "crisis" or "assessment" or "mental" or "psychiatric." This is a continuing step away from using other stigmatizing and potent terms like "nutcase" or "wackjob" or "asshole" to refer to persons who are acutely ill. Professionals might object, but you're not asking them to come in for treatment.

Hooper Center is a good example of this renaming effect. David P Hooper was an alcoholic who utilized the county sobering services over and over. The message of David Hooper's experience is – don't give up, keep coming back.

We suggest the facility be named after someone in our community who is both deceased and would have made use of the facility had they had the opportunity. Emily Comeaux would be an excellent choice.

PEERS ARE IMPORTANT

Peer outreach workers should staff the front door of the facility 24 / 7. Agencies in Portland have been training persons with mental illness to provide direct services for years, and Central City Concern has excelled in recruiting, hiring, training, and managing persons in recovery for decades. The recent documentary film, FINDING NORMAL, is an explicit view of the dramatic affect peers can have individualizing the experience of recovery

Peers have an orientation to recovery which is impossible to generate in a professional – though some professionals are in recovery themselves and some are good at faking it. Their value is to act as a human segue, a intimate problem-solver, a minder, a role model, a constant conduit. And for persons contemplating the difficult changes required to gain sanity and sobriety there is value in having a relationship with someone who is NOT a professional. It's important to respect the peer skill set and acknowledge that peer employees may choose to continue to grow and change themselves and their capacity to act as a peer may end as their personal recovery advances.

OVERSIGHT

Almost everything in that generational redesign of the community mental health system failed or floundered – largely because of infighting between county bureaucrats. But there was one important promise made, which you didn't keep, probably because no one told you about it. The promise was the county would no longer create programs and policies about mental health services without persons who used mental health services engaged and involved with the decision making.

Create an oversight committee for the new facility which reports to the county chair. This committee should be staffed, have a small budget for meetings, printing and postage, and be made up entirely of persons who would be likely users of the facility. Family members, professionals, and the general public should be allowed to attend meetings, but the voice of the committee should be the voice of those using the services.

This committee should meet at least monthly and for the minimum of one year and have the capacity to reform to respond to a critical incident at the facility.

UNDERSTANDING TRAUMA

Just about everything we presumed was true about mental illness in 1996, when Emily Comeaux suicided in the CTC waiting room, we now think is wrong. In 1996 we looked back at the prior decade with the same skepticism. What we do today, in the clutches, is often pre-scientific, and with our forced perspective we think it works. Odds say that assumption is probably wrong.

But the truth is there is probably something which works better and we should be on a quest for that something.

What's been true forever is compassion is a good guide. What we have learned in the past decade is there are a large number of people who may or may not have mental illness, but who act like it largely because they have been traumatized somehow and that trauma has been ignored or diminished by their community. This group includes not only people who are defined as mentally ill, but also a growing group of emergency workers, soldiers, police officers, and those who have been victims of crimes.

Emily Comeaux was one of those persons. This is from a note she left for her daughter,

"Now you listen real close to this. I DID NOT GIVE UP. I fought with every ounce of strength I had, you saw me fight, watched the battle many years. I'm not gone, you just can't talk to me for a while. Baby I know this is going to hurt real bad but I also know I raised a fighter with a loud voice to shout that the system is wrong. I am doing this to help others."

We suspect a large number of people who will be brought to this new facility are people who are primarily affected by trauma. We suggest the entire staff of the agency which manages the facility, and those who sit on an oversight committee, or are staff of the county who provide fiscal or political oversight, receive training about trauma.

Statement of Multnomah County Chair Ted Wheeler June 25, 2009

The tragic death of Jim Chasse has forced everybody in the community to take a hard look at the ways we try and sometimes fail to help our neighbors who face the challenge of mental illness. From community discussions in the aftermath of Jim Chasse's death, important reforms have been identified and implemented and larger changes are in process. It is personally important to me that we demonstrate that Jim Chasse's death serves as a continuing reminder to us of the need to substantially improve the way the community responds to mental illness and build systems of support that can sustain recovery. Recovery must be our goal.

Multnomah County's settlement of the lawsuit arising from Jim Chasse's death will end our participation in legal proceedings but it in no way ends our efforts to follow through with reforms advanced in the wake of the tragedy. The big problems in the global economy and the financial collapse of our largest local mental health provider have slowed our progress toward a new mental health crisis center, but we are still moving forward.

In 2006, after I was elected County Chair but before I took office, I co-chaired the Task Force on Mental Health and Public Safety organized by Mayor Potter. Working closely with Senator Avel Gordley, we listened to the community, consulted diverse stakeholders and developed an action list of changes that were needed to get better outcomes for people with mental illness and the public safety professionals that protect our community.

Improved training of public safety staff regarding mental health issues was a top priority and that has been in place for more than two years now. Guidelines on the use of force by law enforcement have been revised. Booking procedures at the jail have changed. Mental health professionals have increased their collaboration with law enforcement officers.

We all agree that there are too many people with mental illness in jail. Since 2007, we have been working to open a new facility where trained staff can assess and treat people with mental illness who come into contact with police officers. The center would provide a continuum of support that would help bolster recovery, find and maintain housing and offer the kinds of services that would allow people with mental illness to move toward independence.

I still cannot predict the date that the mental health treatment and assessment center will open its doors, but I am confident we will get there. The financial collapse of Cascadia Behavioral Healthcare in 2008 was a temporary set-back. The severe budget cuts we faced this year meant that we could only put a million dollars towards moving the project forward, but we do have a plan.

Central City Concern is remodeling the old Ramada hotel and will move their detox facility to that new site. The current detox site will be remodeled to serve as the mental health crisis center. Much of the funding is in place and we will move aggressively to complete the project.

Next week the Board of County Commissioners will consider a resolution on the development of the mental health assessment and treatment center. This discussion will take place at the same meeting that we consider the settlement of the lawsuit arising from Jim Chasse's death. It is important that we reach closure on this tragedy, but we must also remember the lessons we have learned and redouble our efforts to prevent future tragedies.

Multnomah County would be smart to settle Chasse suit

Posted by aereline June 26, 2009 19:44PM

At long last, someone has made a smart decision in the case of poor James Chasse. Not surprisingly, it's Ted Wheeler.

Chasse, a schizophrenic man, was behaving oddly and possibly urinating on a tree when police spotted him on Sept. 17, 2006.

Two Portland officers and a Multnomah County deputy approached Chasse figuring they were dealing with a drunk or a drug addict. He ran. As Pearl District diners and shoppers looked on, police chased Chasse and knocked him to the sidewalk. He screamed and fought to break free. Officers used physical force -- their fists, feet and finally a Taser -- to subdue him.

Paramedics at the scene said Chasse's vital signs were normal, so officers tied his feet to his hands and took him to the Multnomah County Detention Center. A jail nurse evaluated Chasse's condition through a cell window. She watched him twitch for a few seconds, told officers he needed medical care and walked away. He died in the back seat of a patrol car on the way to Portland Adventist, less than two hours after his encounter with police.

Chasse's family filed a federal lawsuit against the city, the county, the ambulance company, the police chief, the mayor, the officers, paramedics and jail staff. The lawsuit, since split into separate cases against the officers involved and the government agencies, alleges that Chasse's civil rights were violated, and that pretty much everyone who could screw up did.

Activists for the poor and mentally ill have accused police of beating Chasse to death, then covering up their use of excessive force. Police, in turn, say they've been vilified for a tragic accident.

We may never really know precisely what happened, which particular version of events is closest to the truth or which particular bad decision caused his death.

Which is why Wheeler's decision this week to ask his Multnomah County Board of Commissioners to settle its part of the suit for close to $1 million feels both wise and compassionate.

I know, I know. Chasse may not have been an entirely innocent victim. Officers approached because he appeared to be urinating in public. He ran from them and resisted arrest with surprising force, scratching and biting. A grand jury found no reason to charge anyone involved in chasing Chasse down with a crime. The state medical examiner ruled his death accidental, the natural result of a 245-pound man crashing down on top of a 145-pound one.

Settling the lawsuit is a good business decision. A trial of this magnitude -- involving expert witnesses, conflicting eyewitness testimony and outside lawyers -- could cost taxpayers more than the $925,000 settlement even if the county were to win.

Settling is also the right thing to do because, on a broader level, we all share blame for Chasse's death.

The city and county systems for handling mentally ill people have improved since Chasse's death. The Portland Police Bureau now trains officers about how to deal with mentally ill people and tightened rules about when they can use force. County leaders changed booking procedures at the jail and are close to construction of a $3 million mental health assessment and treatment center. Still, the county's mental health programs and the city's affordable housing efforts both remain woefully understaffed, underfunded and underappreciated.

Wheeler's decision to settle is a nod to the vast amount of work left to be done. And, even if he doesn't intend it that way, next week's county vote on the deal is a reminder to everyone else in this lawsuit that the money being devoted to legal wrangling would be better used fixing a system still undeniably broken.

A said commentary on the state of our tort system. Even though it can be rightfully argued the officers were merely doing their jobs and the incident was a tragic accident, it may still be cheaper to settle for nearly a million dollars. There was shown to be no criminal wrong doing but that clearly has no importance when it comes to the skewed civil litigation system. People sue the police everyday knowing that it is often cheaper for the government to give them some undeserved money rather than spend much more on a trial.

This wack job should have never been let run loose in the first place. I don't blame the cops for taking him down. The family who now is seeing "DOLLAR" signs and is sooooo concerned, couldn't have given a crap the night he was on the rampage. The lawyers are laughing all the way to the bank.

James Chasse was killed in a horrible way. His ribs were broken and his lung punctured. A very heavy officer tackled him and caused grave injuries. Do you think that is all right? We are going to have people on the streets who have mental health issues. Apparently our mental health system is not adequate, so officers hired to "protect and serve" are going to need to use their heads more and their weapons and brute force less. It might be easy for 'rockright' to justify what happened to James by calling him a "wack job", but I cannot tolerate killing a person for just being a little different. Chasse was not armed and was not violent. You are seeking to marginalize him by calling him a wack job. A society is measured by the way it cares for its weakest members, and the officers who killed James Chasse failed miserably.

It's still about the money. That was my main point. This so called Family didn't care enough to keep him off the street, but sure are going to try and collect big time. And he was violent.

Of the many articles, opinion letters and comments regarding the Chasse saga, few have ever asked the question of where was his family and what responsibility of theirs was it to have kept him from degenerating the way he did? Where was the concern that he wasn't getting treatment? Where was their outrage when he was living in the streets? What was their responsibility and care when he wasn't taking his medications?

You do ask important questions. I do not know the Chasse family, but I know other families who struggle with the health system. The problems are endless and the solutions few. James Chasse was not actually homeless. He lived in a half-way house. He was a 42 year old man and even the mentally ill have a right to live on their own. We all need to be asking what is wrong with a system that cannot adequately treat those among us who have mental issues. We do need to be outraged when people are forced to live on the streets. We do need to find ways to help those who need medications to get them and to take them. What we do NOT need are bullying and lethal "peace officers" beating people to death because they do not behave in a rational manner.

If we had actual community policing instead of fake lip-service to it, the police would have known who he was and that he was mentally ill.

The police seem to be good at roid rages and filling out false time cards, and not much else. My wife was the victim of a hit-and-run driver who changed lanes and crushed her car against an exit ramp wall and dragged her 100 feet. She HAD the license number. The police refused to investigate it, saying that since the perp took off it was an "unattended hit and run", like if someone scratches your car in a parking lot. Our insurance company tracked down the license and it was a stolen license plate from a boat in Montana. The police are scared of REAL criminals, they like to pick on the mentally ill instead.

Much has been said about the Chasse family, and how much money they are going to receive as the result of a bunch of thugs kicking their son to the curb and killing him, simply because he ALLEGEDLY was looking for a place to urinate.

Two thirds of the HUGE sum of money they will "receive" for their son's life (albeit, to read some of your words a worthless life) will go to pay the lawyer's fees, another huge chunk for all of the court costs incurred, and another for taxes. Ultimately, they may see a couple of hundred grand, which even in today's economy is negligible.

Having said this, let us consider a far more important point than Jim Chasse, or his family: Think for a moment how this atmosphere of violent response might effect YOU. Suppose that you, or someone you love should have a bad response to their insulin, or other drug (legal, of course), and start acting "weird," like a "whack job." Given the current climate of abuse, and grand juries that condone such abuse, your chances of survival are pretty slim.

Fuoad Kaady was the victim of a very similar set of circumstances. He was acting very strange, indeed, unless you considered for one moment that he had just had the skin burned from most of his body. The police response (protect and serve)? Fill his young body with lead, but not before you tazer him until both of your star trek guns are out of juice.

The point here is that the cops are too damn quick to respond with violence.

Were it possible, under current guidelines, to place Mr. Chasse into some kind of inpatient care, one might think that then he would be safe from such overweening violence, but one would be wrong. Consider the case of Jose Mejia Poot: He was in such a secure, locked down facility, and because he could not speak english, he was trying to impress upon his "caretakers" that he needed to contact his family. In pursuit of this goal, he apparently "armed" himself with a fire extinguisher, and sealed his doom. Two of Portland's finest received medals of valor for snuffing out this ne'er do well.

What I intend to say here is that it is not about Jim Jim, not about Fouad, and Not about Jose, it is about US, dear people, and at this time, it is about US versus THEM (the police) They are killing us, and being rewarded for doing so. I am just sorry that the Chasse's were not able to force each of those cops, and their "supervisors" to pay out huge personal damages. We have really gone wrong, when we allow them to continue to work and violate human rights daily, and then reward them for killing someone.

No amount of money can make up for the way our society has abandoned those citizens who are mentally ill.

Being mentally ill is not a crime yet, rather than provide mental health care as needed, we use our jails and prisons as mental health treatment facilities. We expect professionals trained to apprehend criminals to deal with mentally ill citizens acting out on the street.

I'm with sdep -- we need to take better care of our mentally ill. Something is wrong with a society that does not take care of people who cannot care for themselves. It takes a village, but the stigma of mental illness discourages both families and villagers from reaching out to each other.

Ms. Griffin, you write, "Settling is also the right thing to do because, on a broader level, we all share blame for Chasse's death."

You'll have to explain this statement, why "we all share blame for Chasse's death." What is it that you, Ms. Griffin, have done that puts you at blame for his death? What is it that any of us, who absolutely have had no association or knowlegde of Chasse, have done that cause us to share blame for Chasse's death? What is the "broader level" that implicates all of us? Your assertion deserves an explanation, please provide it.

"We all share blame for Chasse's death"? What a bunch of touchy ,feely BS. I don't share blame for anything. If this guy was locked up and taken care of by his family, none of this crap would of happened.

But the family is sure going to profit, aren't they. By not taking care of Chasse they made a big payday for themselves and the biggest winners "the lawyers".

Now isn't that a heartwarming story.
