III. Findings and Recommendations

DHS and CCFC Staff identified 97 county programs in fiscal year 2011 that served children and families involved with child welfare.

Themes from County Program Feedback

- Some programs lack effective communication with DHS
- Difficult to find funding to bring programs to scale and maintain them over time
- Need more collocation of staff, joint funding, clear protocols for interaction and/or joint case planning

III. Findings and Recommendations

Participants in the workgroup often identified families that ended up in the child welfare system due to a lack of adequate prevention and basic needs services.

Themes from County Workgroup

- Address disparities for African American and Native American families
- Invest more in prevention services
- Review current policies and procedures that impact families in the child welfare system
- Improve service coordination and collaboration

III. Findings and Recommendations

If termination of parental rights and removal are to become last resorts, then a fundamental shift in how the County and State think about child welfare must occur.

Recommendations

1. Multnomah County should continue to support Countywide efforts to promote racial equity and empowerment through policy, programmatic and organizational changes.

III. Findings and Recommendations

If termination of parental rights and removal are to become last resorts, then a fundamental shift in how the County and State think about child welfare must occur.

Recommendations

2. Multnomah County should include in its legislative agenda supporting comprehensive state tax reform that ensures Oregon maintains investments in preventative and supportive services for struggling families that help prevent entry into the child welfare system.

III. Findings and Recommendations

If termination of parental rights and removal are to become last resorts, then a fundamental shift in how the County and State think about child welfare must occur.

Recommendations

3. Individual County department should explore systematic ways to document child welfare involvement of the children and families they serve and work, where appropriate, to coordinate County and State investments with families.

III. Findings and Recommendations

If termination of parental rights and removal are to become last resorts, then a fundamental shift in how the County and State think about child welfare must occur.

Recommendations

4. Replicate the successful “30 Families in 30 Days” housing model created by Commissioner Kafoury and the Department of County Human Services, with a new focus on aligning County and State resources so families would be able to keep their children out of foster care or have their children returned.

III. Findings and Recommendations

If termination of parental rights and removal are to become last resorts, then a fundamental shift in how the County and State think about child welfare must occur.

Recommendations

5. Create a joint DHS/County workgroup to explore opportunities for greater partnerships, coordination and improved client care for children with developmental disabilities.

III. Findings and Recommendations

If termination of parental rights and removal are to become last resorts, then a fundamental shift in how the County and State think about child welfare must occur.

Recommendations

6. Establish a task force to study how DHS, the Courts and Multnomah County might help decrease the number of family members who are excluded as placement resources because of past criminal records.

III. Findings and Recommendations

If termination of parental rights and removal are to become last resorts, then a fundamental shift in how the County and State think about child welfare must occur.

Recommendations

7. Continue to support the Community Response to Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children program and support efforts to prevent victimization of children and provide support services for children who have been victimized. Continue working collaboratively across County departments and State agencies to address the needs of this population with a special attention to children who have been engaged in the child welfare system.
