The Community Health Council is a group, made up mostly of patients, that helps to govern the Health Department's community health centers. It works together with the Board of County Commissioners, who provides general fiscal and personnel oversight.

The council works closely with the community health centers director and the Board of County Commissioners to provide guidance and direction on programs and policies affecting patients of Multnomah County's health services. It also provides input and direction for federally funded clinical activities.

Two community members have applied and would add tremendous value to the work of the board:

- Marisa Polonsky – Ms. Polonsky brings her previous board experience and leadership to the council. Her interests include; public policy, youth and student health, and improving access to healthcare in our community. Ms. Polonsky expressed interest via an email inquiry after hearing about the board through her educational program.
- Teresita Lee – Ms. Lee is a cancer survivor and is interested in health education and outreach. She recently started teaching English as a second language at PCC.
- Michael Staley – Mr. Staley is currently serving on the Health Services Center patient Advisory Board. His board interests include; access to health care, and addiction and recovery services.
