The Defending Childhood Initiative is one of US Attorney General Eric Holder’s priorities and is jointly managed by the Office of Justice Programs, Office of Community Oriented Policing Services and Office on Violence Against Women. Since 2010, The Department of Justice has provided over 2.27 million in funding to Multnomah County to build local capacity to recognize, respond to and prevent children’s exposure to violence. This briefing will provide information on how these dollars are being spent, the work currently undertaken and future planning.

Research from the National Survey of Children’s Exposure to Violence finds that 60% of children were exposed to some form of violence in the past year and children are more likely exposed to violence than adults. Further, on-going research of trauma and child development finds chronic stress and trauma in childhood can lead to poor physical, behavioral and mental health outcomes over their lifespan.
