Eastside Concern is the new name for the program formerly known as the Southeast Portland Change Point Program, operated by Central City Concern. Eastside Concern provides outpatient alcohol and drug treatment services which fulfill treatment requirements for individuals referred due to Driving while Under the Influence of Intoxicants (DUII) or involvement with the county's Health Services (DCHS) or Community Justice (DCJ). In addition, Eastside Concern has a treatment program for domestic violence perpetrators. Recently, Eastside Concern has added culturally specific treatment services for African Americans. Services that are not covered by insurance are offered on a sliding fee scale. Eastside Concern serves approximately 900 people yearly.

Puentes, also operated by Central City Concern, is a culturally specific addiction and mental health program serving Latino adults, teens and families and was established in 2005, serving more than 100 families yearly. Staff members are bilingual and bicultural. Individuals have access to recovery mentors for added support. Case management is offered to assist in coordinating other supports such as primary care and housing.
