Portland Public Schools Update

Portland Public Schools' (PPS) Assistant Superintendent Antonio Lopez gave an update on disproportionate exclusionary discipline. The superintendent has prioritized reducing overall exclusionary discipline and to reducing disproportionality in exclusionary discipline. The presentation focused on 2014-2015 data on 4-year graduation rate by presence or absence of exclusion during high school; percent of students excluded over time; exclusionary incidents per 100 students; and the percentage of students excluded at least once by race and gender. Graphs were used to show the district is on track to achieve its goals. The key strategies are Collaborative Action Research for Equity (CARE), Positive Behavioral Interventions & Supports (PBIS), and Restorative Justice (RJ).

House Bill 553, which limits the use of out-of-school suspension or expulsion for students in kindergarten through fifth grade, will have an impact on k-5 exclusions. PPS has added counselors, kindergarten education assistants, school climate TOSAs (Teachers on Special Assignment) and RJ and PBIS support across the district.

For more information, see the Portland Public Schools Presentation.

East County Schools Update

Sam Breyer, Superintendent of Centennial School District, set goals to reduce expulsions by 50%. His presentation included the district's expulsions and out-of-school suspensions overall trend and trends by ethnicity. The out-of-school suspension relative rate index was reviewed. Changing policies on weapons and drug possession has had a positive impact on reducing expulsions. The number of days out of school has been reduced.

James Hiu of Gresham Barlow presented yearly snapshots of the district's ethnicity and of school exclusion. Attendance is a community issue. Increasing attendance by 5% increases graduation rate by 8%.
