A Home for Everyone:

A United Community Plan to End Homelessness for Portland/Multnomah County

Portland prides itself in being a wonderful place to call home. We possess the assets of a thriving urban center while maintaining the feeling of a close community. Here, "offering a helping hand" is not just a cliché, it's how we interact with one another and our community.

Despite our city's strengths, every resident does not experience the same quality of life. Increased unemployment and a widening gap between the wealthy and poor show that we do not share equally in the economic benefits and opportunities our city has to offer.

Homelessness is a crisis. We need to urgently respond because lives are at stake as a result of our actions. The facts are:

- 1,700 people sleep on our sidewalks each night.
- Nearly half (46%) of those experiencing homelessness are people of color, although they comprise only 29% percent of Multnomah County's population.
- More than 3,000 school children in Multnomah County were homeless last year.
- Two out of three of our lowest-income neighbors pay more than half of their income on rent, placing them at risk of losing their homes.

Why a plan will make a difference

- Homelessness can be solved. Prior to the 1980's, it didn't exist in the numbers we see today. And, it can be prevented; we know what works well in our community.
- Housing is the foundation of a person's success in achieving good health, education and employment/income; it allows people to participate and contribute in their communities.
- There is a significant shortage of affordable housing in our community. Addressing this shortage is key to ending homelessness in our community. This plan will focus our efforts to expand affordable housing access for our lowest-income residents and prevent new people from becoming homeless.
- Ending homelessness will reduce disparities in housing access for people of color. There are significant racial inequities among those who experience homelessness. Our plan will offer effective solutions to decrease and eliminate these disparities.
- Homelessness is expensive for residents and businesses. It increases costs for health and mental health care, jails, police and schools. We save money and produce better outcomes when people have a place to call home. Our whole community advances when homelessness is ended.

Responding to the crisis of homelessness

Over the past eight years, our community has come together in unprecedented ways to respond to the crisis of homelessness. The Ten Year Plan to End Homelessness (Ten Year Plan) was launched in December 2004, which established ambitious goals, improved service delivery and targeted investments and partnerships across public, private and nonprofit sectors. Our successes are highlighted in Attachment A, "Ten Year Plan Summary: 2005-2011 (Years 1 to 7)".
